

A developmental delay is seen when a child's rate of growth and learning is different from that of most children the same age. A developmental delay may be in one of the following areas:

- Thinking
- Talking
- Hearing
- Seeing
- Moving
- Taking care of basic needs
- Responding to others